Monday night Conductor Harris, of the Perry-street line, had an altercation with a negro passenger, and came out of the difficulty badly disfigured. The negro had Harris by the throat choking him, and had bitten the conductor on the law, when Motorman Tom Martin went around the rear of the car where the beligerents were to see what was going on.

Martin saw that the negro had a fierce grip on the conductor's throat, and he told the negro to let go. The nexto would not do so, and so the motorman dealt him a sharp blow on the head with the switch handle. The darkey then let go his hold on Harris.
Conductor Harris is but a mere boy about 180 pounds.

Yesterday morning the regro came to the police station and gave himself up and got out a warrant for the conductor.
The nexto gave his name as Albert Ruffin and says the conductor insulted him.
He also said that he went to the powerhouse yesterday morning to report the conductor, but some of the men up there made it so hot for him that he had to get

York Girls Are Shy.

Colonel Thomas Ruggels, of Norfolk. Va., who has been in this city for a week, looking for a wife, started for home yesterday still sad and lonely, says yesterday's New York World. Colonel Ruggels wanted a wife who was pretty, and not being able to find one at home came to New York, where he thought there would be no trouble. He made his wants known by the means of an advertisement, and for many long, weary days sat in his room at Smith & McNell's Hotel waiting for the right party to appear. It was not because there were no responses to his appead that Colonel Ruggels went home alone. He did not fancy any of the women who called on him. The clerk of the hotel says he does not blame him. They were nearly all elderly and painted, and the Colonel sized them up as fortune-hunters.

Only one girl appeared who struck Colonel Ruggel's fancy, and he engaged to marry her on the spot. The ceremony was to have been performed Saturday morning, and the hotel parlor was fixed up and a minister engaged, but she falled to appear.

Has Been Burning Thirty Years,

Has Been Burning Thirty Years.

DENVER, COL., Oct.-22.—A fire caused by spontaneous combustion in a hill above the town of Maryshal, Boulder county, Col., thirty years ago, threatens to communicate to the surrounding valuable coal fields, and render them worthless. The fire at first emitted only smoke; then it quickened to a dull, red glow, and now, despite years of efforts to drown it out and wall it in, it rages throughout an underground area of from two hundred to three hundred acres, and spouts flame, cinders and smoke through a dozen outlets, each of which might vie in appearance with the crater of a working volcano. Property worth millions of dollars has been destroyed. Two weeks ago the miners were driven by sulphurous smoke from the drift of the last coal mine that was workable on "Volcano Hill." as the scene of the fire is known. Since then several attempts have been made to rescue the tools, which were abandoned in the subterranean chambers of the mine, but they failed of success. Now all hope of saving the tools, as well as of ever reopening the mine, has been given up, for the timbering of the shaft has given way through its entire length. Yesterday the flames from below burst clear through the surface of the hill, and the mouth of the drift has become choked up with tons of red-hot rock and clay that caved in when the fire found vent not more than one hundred feet from the opening in the slope or side of the hill.
